

a

A recent scientific study (SURE, 2024) has investigated the opinions of residents in Switzerland on biodiversity and CO₂-emissions. According to this study, 97.1% of residents in Switzerland regard CO₂-emissions as more important than you thought they would. The following graph summarises these results.

b

The same study (SURE, 2024) has further investigated the opinions of residents in Switzerland on land-use and CO₂-emissions. According to this study, 98.4% of residents in Switzerland regard CO₂-emissions as more important than you thought they would. The following graph summarises these results.

